

Biographical Note

Born in Ourém at 1979, Bruno Vieira is graduated in Environmental Engineering at the University of the Azores and with a degree of Doctor from the Delft University of Technology (TU Delft - Netherlands) in Applied Sciences. Is also qualified in "Quality Management" and "Occupational Health and Safety".

In 2002 he started research work at Instituto Tecnológico Nuclear – ITN (Bobadela, Portugal) and Nuclear Engineering Teaching Laboratory, University of Texas (Austin, USA), where he developed until 2005 her professional abilities on Instrumental Nuclear Activation Analysis applied to several environmental samples. Subsequently, he developed his activities and quality and environment management in industries, having also assumed responsibilities as Head of Department in the supervision of projects related to ISO 9001, ISO 14001, EMAS III and ISO 12647-2:2007.

He lectured at the University of the Azores as also in other professional schools the subject "Environmental Management" and "Occupational Health and Safety". Some of his environmental intervention projects in the industry were recognized by national awards and in 2011 he was distinguished with the "Young Scientist and Student Competitive Award", attributed by Texas A&M University.

B.J. Vieira is author and co-author of 15 papers in international peer review journals and he attends to several international conferences in this scientific field and is reviewer of several publications on international scientific journals.

In 2015 he joined EDA, S.A. where is actualy the Diretor of Quality, Environment and Safety Integrated Management Department.